Analysis: Key Takeaways

- The overall number of posts has dropped near the numbers we witnessed ahead of the House vote. That said, 15,000 posts is still impressive, especially considering they took place over the holiday period. Despite the percentage share of the conversation decreasing overall (-4 to 28%) for a third period in a row, sentiment against impeachment is still solidly ahead sentiment for impeachment, which also dropped (-6 to 20%). The neutral sentiment increased (+10 to 52%) where chatter was dominated by a confused electorate trying to make sense of what is happening and what it means.
- Continued neutral discussion, characterized by sharing explainers and seeking to learn more about the charges and process, and increased attention to Senator McConnell's proposed handling of the Senate trial, points to an opportunity for impeachment supporters. To capitalize, they could employ a two-pronged argument that emphasizes the need for removal on the merits and criticism of Senator McConnell for failing to hold a fair trial in order to protect Trump.

Pro-Impeachment

- Those in favor of impeachment have become incensed at their opponents' apparent attempts to rig the process. Senator McConnell is name checked and accused of abuse of office for willingness to work with the White House to try to control the proceedings and outcome.
- In addition, they see events in the Middle East as a blatant attempt by Trump to draw public attention away from his impeachment.

Anti-Impeachment

- Speaker Pelosi comes under fire for abuse of power in failing to present the articles of impeachment. For those already convinced impeachment is a hoax and a sham, this is further proof that she has little evidence on which to remove Trump from office. They believe her actions serve only to damage America, for which she will never be forgiven.

Methodology

This analysis is based on collected, publicly available, online data geo-located to rural populations in the six states from December 24, 2019 to January 05, 2020 related to President Trump's impeachment. In total, 15,000 posts from 2,900 authors were collected across the six states.

Randomized, representative samples of these conversations were analyzed after removing shares, retweets, repetition, media, and influencers from the dataset to focus solely on the views of local citizens. These conversations were then scored – positive, negative, or neutral – from the perspective of Trump.
